UNIVERSITY TEACHING AND LEARNING CERTIFICATE

The Centre for Teaching and Learning (CTL) is offering a non-credit certificate in teaching and learning in post-secondary settings. The program is open to all staff and faculty members at UCQ with an interest in university teaching.

Offered over two semesters, the program affords the flexibility of acquiring stackable certificates for modules completed with a certificate awarded on completion of the required modules.

All modules in the program draw on research literature for evidence-based excellence in teaching and learning practice. For each module, the facilitator or the program coordinator will assess the participants' work on a pass/fail basis according to pre-determined standards for learning outcomes.

Modules within the program include: Developing your Teaching Philosophy Statement, Developing your Teaching Dossier, Learning Theories and Issues in Teaching and Learning, Teaching Second Language Learners, Teaching in Today's Classroom, Teaching in Clinical Settings, Understanding Curriculum, and a chance to design a Scholarship of Teaching and Learning (SoTL), or an Educational Leadership project. Credit would be given for sessions previously attended.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

- Explore the role of the educator in higher education
- Reflect on and articulate beliefs about teaching and learning
- Develop a teaching portfolio as evidence of excellence in teaching
- Apply learning theories in decisions on teaching and learning
- Identify and use appropriate teaching and learning, and assessment strategies
- Evaluate the alignment within a given curriculum
- Propose a design for a SoTL or explore educational leadership principles
